

FORMAT	SHOOT TIME	GEAR	SPEAKER
Talking head, 20–25 sec	~10 min per video	iPhone + lavalier	Asher or Darius

Six talking-head video scripts for fast in-house production. Each is structured as: HOOK CARD (3-second text overlay), TALK (you to camera, talking points to improvise around — not word-for-word), and CTA CARD (3-second close). Designed to feel real and unscripted on camera. Improvise around the talking points instead of reading them. Each video is shootable in 10 minutes.

Setting — office, kitchen, back of a truck, walking by a property. Natural light through a window. Chest-up shot, eyes on the lens. Audio — use AirPods Pro or lav mic, NOT phone built-in. Quiet room.

Compliance — NC GC License #107724 must appear in the CTA card on every video.

WHOLESALE VIDEOS

3 angles — rehab number / GC perspective / $32K gap

VIDEO 1 — Your rehab number is up for negotiation

~25 sec · casual frustration, like explaining to a friend at coffee

① HOOK CARD · text on screen, 3 seconds, no voice

Your rehab number is up for negotiation.

② TALK TO CAMERA · ~18 sec talking to camera

"Here's the thing nobody tells wholesalers. When you bring a deal to a cash buyer with YOUR rehab number on it — that's a starting point for them. They're going to walk the property, find things, and start chopping.

The wholesalers closing at the top of the range stopped writing their own rehab numbers. They have a licensed NC GC write it — AND commit to do the work at that price. That's the part that ends the negotiation.

The buyer can argue with the GC who's going to do the build. Or he can sign."

VIDEO 2 — I'm a licensed GC. Here's what I see at closing tables.

~20 sec · authority position, calm and direct

① HOOK CARD · text on screen, 3 seconds, no voice

I'm a licensed NC general contractor. Here's what I see at closing tables.

② TALK TO CAMERA · ~15 sec talking to camera

"A wholesaler brings a deal with a $35K rehab number. The buyer walks it, sees the panel needs an upgrade, sees the roof line is shot. Turns to the wholesaler and says: 'Your rehab number's wrong — I'll do this deal but at $5K assignment, not $25.' Wholesaler can't defend the number. Takes the $5K.

Here's what changes when we get involved. We walk the property. We write the rehab budget. AND we commit to do the work at that number. Now when the buyer pushes back, the answer is: 'we'll do it for this — that's how real it is.'

Buyer signs the assignment at the top of the range. Every time."

VIDEO 3 — The $32K question for wholesalers

~22 sec · curious / provocative, direct challenge

① HOOK CARD · text on screen, 3 seconds, no voice

$32,000.
That's the gap between the worst NC wholesaler and the best.

② TALK TO CAMERA · ~16 sec talking to camera

"Same property. Same buyer pool. Same week of the year.

Lowest-paid wholesaler walks away with $8K. Highest paid: $40K-plus.

The difference is who wrote the rehab number. The bad one — napkin off comps. The middle one — solo budget. The winner — a licensed NC GC walked the property, wrote the budget, AND committed to do the work at that price.

When the buyer knows the GC who wrote it will also build it, there's no argument to have. That's the $32K."

INVESTOR VIDEOS

3 angles — 'this is for you' / contrarian / hybrid model

VIDEO 4 — If you flip more than 2 houses a year, watch this

~22 sec · identification first, 'this is for you' energy

① HOOK CARD · text on screen, 3 seconds, no voice

If you flip more than 2 houses a year —
this one's for you.

② TALK TO CAMERA · ~16 sec talking to camera

"You've got two options most investors use, and they both suck.

Option one: be your own GC. Burn out chasing permits and contractors. Lose deals because you're not underwriting.

Option two: hire a full GC. The GC takes your margin and you stop scaling.

There's a third thing. We carry the GC license. You stay the PM and keep the margin. Owner-Controlled Build."

VIDEO 5 — Most investors lose money on execution, not deals

~20 sec · contrarian, counter conventional wisdom

① HOOK CARD · text on screen, 3 seconds, no voice

Most investors don't lose money on the deal.
They lose it on the rehab.

② TALK TO CAMERA · ~14 sec talking to camera

"The deal makes sense at $250K with $50K rehab. You close. Three months in, the rehab is $80K. Six months in, $95K. You break even on a deal that should've paid $30K.

Where did it go? Execution. Permits, change orders, contractor drift.

Get the rehab number locked before you close. Run the project with structure. Different ending."

VIDEO 6 — The hybrid nobody talks about

~25 sec · insider knowledge, 'here's something nobody's telling you'

① HOOK CARD · text on screen, 3 seconds, no voice

There's a hybrid build model nobody's talking about.

② TALK TO CAMERA · ~18 sec talking to camera

"Every flipper or investor I talk to thinks they have two options. Self-manage and lose your weekends, or hire a GC and lose your margin.

The hybrid: a licensed NC general contractor carries the license, pulls permits, runs the execution controls. YOU stay the project manager. You make the calls. You sign off on draws. You keep the upside.

It's called Owner-Controlled Build. Most investors haven't seen it because most GCs would rather just take the whole job."
